May 2016

Our annual theme for 2016 is Igniting the Archetypes.

During May, the archetypal pattern we will be looking at is the Artist. Full of ideas? Are ordinary methods of communication too limiting for all that you want to express? Do colors speak to you in a language all their own? Does making something from nothing give you a thrill? Well, hello, Artist!

The Artist-scientist is one of the Jungian archetypes in mythology. While never as common as archetypes like the Child or the Hero, the artist-scientist is immediately recognizable. They are a builder, an inventor, a seeker, a dreamer, and a thinker. Distracted by their own thoughts, they frequently have to be pulled in out of the rain. They are simultaneously vastly knowledgeable and yet innocent, impulsive yet cautious. They represent the wonder to be found in curiosity, and the dangers. The name references the idea that they are both a creator and a discoverer, and that they are not a fount of information like the Bard or an adviser like the Wise Old Man, but a source of change.
