Exercising the Imagination

Rev. Karen Lindvig

You need imagination in order to imagine a future that doesn't exist. Azar Nafisi

Our imaginations are like muscles. If they haven't been used they atrophy and we to strengthen them to allow for optimum access. As we start to exercise our imaginations we actually form new neural connections in our brain. Suzanne Murray

Whatever we mirror in our minds becomes a living, active thing, and through it we are connected with the world about us. Through the work of the imaging faculty, every thought makes a form. Charles Fillmore

Work diligently to develop your internal sensory system for each of the levels. Travel now to that place of quantum possibilities where you can choose the patterns for your life to come. See them, feel them, and above all, know them as potential realities that can manifest into the space-time world in which you exist. Jean Houston
